

ECP 2015 – The European Conference on Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences

6th to 8th July 2015

Brighton, United Kingdom

Join IAFOR in the seaside city of Brighton, UK, from July 6–8, for the European Conference on Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences 2015. Explore the conference theme of "Power" in an international, intercultural and interdisciplinary setting.

ecp@iafor.org Enquiries:

<http://iafor.org/iafor/conferences/ecp2015/> Web address:

Sponsored by: IAFOR – The International Academic Forum

ECP2015 Conference Chairs and Featured Speakers

Professor Dexter Da Silva

ECP2015 International Director of Program (Psychology)

Professor of Educational Psychology, Keisen University, Japan

Dr. Dexter Da Silva is currently Professor of Educational Psychology at Keisen University in Tokyo. He has taught EFL at junior high school, language schools, and universities in Sydney, and for the past two decades has been living and teaching at the tertiary level in Japan. Professor Da Silva was educated at the University of Sydney (BA, Dip. Ed., M.A.), and the University of Western Sydney (Ph.D.) He has presented and co-presented at conferences in Asia, Australia, Europe and the U.S., and written or co-written articles and book chapters on education-related topics, such as trust, student motivation, autonomy, and content-based language teaching. He is a past editor and current associate editor of On CUE Journal, regular reviewer for conferences and proceedings, and recent co-chair of the 2011 CUE Conference on Motivation.

Dr. Mervat Abdel Nasser

ECP2015 Featured Speaker

Consultant Psychiatrist and Founder, New Hermopolis

She is a graduate of Cairo Medical School and fellow of the Royal College of Psychiatrists, London. She holds a Master's degree in Philosophy and a doctorate in psychiatry from London University. She also has two diplomas in moral philosophy and the history of medicine.

She served as a clinical psychiatrist and university academic in England from 1977–2007. Her clinical practice focused on general adult psychiatry with special interest in the field of Culture and Mental health. She achieved international stature and reputation through her various publications on the interface between Mind and Culture which included several scientific papers, many presentations delivered at major International Conferences since 1984, three books as well as a number of chapter contributions to several textbooks of Psychiatry. She has special interest in 'theories of education', particularly the integrative models of teaching, and this is reflected in her writings as well as her style of teaching as a university academic and clinical tutor.

She has as well a long-standing interest in Egyptology and has written several books in Arabic addressed to the young reader, including a 40-part illustrated series that won an award for best children writing in 1998. In addition, She has written a collection of psychological/philosophical essays on ancient Egyptian thought entitled – "Why Did Horus Lose His Eye – A New Reading of Annt Egyptian Thought" as well as several books on ancient Egypt and other civilisations.

She took an early retirement from her job as a consultant psychiatrist and senior lecturer at Kings College London in 2007 and returned to Egypt to pursue her dream of establishing the project of New Hermopolis. She has since dedicated herself entirely to this cause.

Conference Theme and Streams

The conference theme is "Power" and the organizers encourage submissions that approach this theme from a variety of perspectives. However, the submission of other topics for consideration is welcome and we also encourage sessions within and across a variety of disciplines and fields related to Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences, including the following streams:

General Psychology
Psychology and Education
Mental Health
Neuroscience
Linguistics, Language and Psychology/Behavioral Science
Industrial Organization and Organization Theory
Community Development
Qualitative/Quantitative Research in any other area of Psychology

To submit your abstract, please create an account with our online submission system. Once you have done so, you will be able to login and submit your abstract.

<http://iafor.org/cfp>