

The COMELA 2019, The Annual Conference on Mediterranean Linguistic Anthropology 2019, in
, announces its Call for Papers, Munich, Germany, September 18 – 21, 2019

The call closes on January 25th, 2019, but may remain open for a week after this date, due to calls for extensions.

Aligning with extensive requests for an Mediterranean specific focus on Linguistic Anthropology, and related fields, The COMELA will bring together Linguists
Anthropologists
Linguistic and Cultural Anthropologists Culturologists
Sociologists
Political Scientists
Those in the Arts other related fields pertinent to The Mediterranean.

The COMELA, housing a large body of globally prominent academics in its Scientific Committee, is proud to inform that the American Anthropological Association endorses the COMELA as its affiliate, as does its Official Publishing partner, Taylor and Francis Global, and as do academic institutions globally.

All media will be visible on the website, including announcements by the Committee Head and Vice Head.

We advise that several Special Journal issues are planned, as well as a collection of Monographs, from papers submitted to the COMELA, and that meet the requirements of submission, review and acceptance. The papers selected will all be published with Top-Tier Ranking journals, and their Publishers. Here, ample assistance will be provided so to revise these manuscripts for publication.

Keynote speakers include globally prominent academics in the field, and will be announced shortly, in accordance with COMELA communication policies. The COMELA 2019 expects approximately 450 presenters, and hence will constitute a major global conference for Linguistic Anthropology.

We thus invite you to the COMELA 2019, the annual academic conference that, together with your assistance, seeks to redefine aspects of Mediterranean Language and Society.
